

Community Center Report

The Community Center program committee has announced its "Fall Spectacular" of programs which will be mailed to residents this week.

Courses include aerobic dance, Boston disco, stretch fabric sewing, cake decoration, dancercise, crocheting, needlepoint, creative reading, automotive self-help, crewel and embroidery, Oriental rug-making, home decorating seminars and a repeat of the American-China Trade course by Ellen Woolf.

Workshops include nutrition and food costs, energy today, consumer affairs, stenciling, crafts, jams and jellies, Greek phylo dough, brunch omelets, CPR and Christmas wreath making. The popular breadmaking workshop will be held for the third time in succession this year.

AUTUMN EXCURSIONS

This Fall's monthly bus trips include an exciting roster: Newport's Strawberry Banke Village, Museum of Fine Arts Chardin exhibit, "The Nutcracker Suite" and a Broadway trip to "Annie."

CENTER SCHOOL OF BALLET

Debbie Edwards, the center's new instructor, currently dances with the Boston Repertory Ballet. She will offer courses for youths and adults Tuesday from 1:30-6 p.m. Ms. Edwards also instructs at the South Shore Conservatory, the Cape Cod Conservatory and Massasoit College. Call the center or Judy Volungis at 383-0752 for class times and registration information. Registration is by mail or in person at the center from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

BOWLING LEAGUES

Bill O'Connell, supervisor of the CCC bowling alleys has announced the fall schedule for leagues and general bowling.

Open bowling Monday through Thursday is from 3-5 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. Women's League is Tuesday, 8-10 p.m., Couples' League is Tuesday from 8 to 10 p.m., Men's League, Wednesday 8 to 10 p.m. Thursday evening from 8 to 10 p.m. is available for a league.

Leagues signing up for mornings are the Roaring Twenty's on Tuesday, the Senior Citizens on Wednesday and youth will sign up on Saturday morning.

Call the center at 383-0088 for more information, or make sure you get a program mailing this week! Membership in the Community is required for all courses, workshops and instructions.

Sailing Club

committee thought it had been shot. Shortly following the blast, Steve Sprole of Scituate finished third, while David Lord and John Kean came in fourth and fifth, respectively.

The Mariner would like to thank the Yacht Club for allowing its reporter on the committee boat with committee members Susan McVeigh and Jeff Nothagle, and club steward Cliff Dickson, who reminds one not a little of Jaws' "Quint," and who we discovered does in fact have some real-life white shark experience.

Dickson said until recently he and Jack Lowes from Indian Trail held the record for harpooning a 1,700 pound white shark in Cohasset waters in 1956. The jaws are in the Scituate home of Mrs. J.W. Lowes.

Dangling our big right toe from the committee boat, we said: "Cliff, would a shark actually eat a boat — like in Jaws?" Quint-like, Cliff only grunted. We retrieved the toe.

Susan McVeigh, who sales a mean little red sailboat but only races in an occasional club chowder, said she would like to make it perfectly clear that she is not permanently volunteering as chairman of the race committee. And after last week, we can certainly see why not.

Some of what we heard we will dispell as rumor, but according to sources, committee boat duty can be dangerous. Of course there is always the possibility of cannon fire from Wakeman's, and Cliff said that one year a boat, while jockeying for starting position, rammed the committee boat causing considerable damage. And then there are the white sharks, which eat committee boats.
